Company history/background

In an originally dormant private limited company (BV) with a limited tax-deductible loss, we included our residential home. We lived in this house through a temporary arrangement while awaiting a permanent residence.

Now that we found a new home a year ago and have since moved, we have offered this house for recreational rental.

The house is for sale for nearly €600,000.

Due to not paying cost-covering rent during our personal use of the property, a tax-deductible loss of €108,000 has accumulated.

The house is very favorably located, next to a Roompot holiday park with views of the marina and water.

In this nearly completed first year of rental, we have achieved a turnover of over €40,000, making this a potentially profitable investment, also considering the tax-deductible loss.

Unique selling points

If the plans of the current government proceed and temporary arrangements are made for higher-end recreational homes, the sales value could increase significantly allowing for a profitable sale. In anticipation of this, a good return can be made on the investment.
